David Blumenthal, MD, MPP

Dr Blumenthal, the Samuel O. Thier Professor of Medicine and Professor of Health Care Policy at Massachusetts General Hospital/Partners HealthCare System and Harvard Medical School, is chief health information and innovation officer at Partners Healthcare System in Boston. He also chairs The Commonwealth Fund Commission on a High Performance Health System. From 2009 to 2011, he served as the national coordinator for health information technology under President Barack Obama, charged with building a nationwide interoperable, privacy-protected health information technology infrastructure. Previously, he held posts as senior vice president at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital and executive director of the Center for Health Policy and Management at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government. During the late 1970s, he was a professional staff member on the late Senator Edward Kennedy's Senate Subcommittee on Health and Scientific Research. Dr Blumenthal is the founding chairman of AcademyHealth, the national organization of health services researchers; a former national correspondent and board member for the New England Journal of Medicine; and a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania Health System. In January 2013, he will become president and chief executive officer of the Commonwealth Fund.

The Aligning Forces for Quality Initiative: Early Lessons From Efforts to Improve Healthcare Quality at the Community Level

This supplement to The American Journal of Managed Care discusses the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Aligning Forces for Quality (AF4Q) initiative, the largest privately funded community-based quality improvement initiative to date. It provides funds and technical assistance to 16 multi-stakeholder alliances located throughout the United States, with the goal of improving patient health and healthcare. This supplement includes original research manuscripts describing the AF4Q initiative and results thus far. It also presents perspective articles from nationally recognized thought leaders.
